BATTLE OF KIRKSVILLE

The 150th Anniversary of the Battle of Kirksville 3 day event was executed with great success. This was the last year of a 3 year program. The Committee was originally started with approval by the City Council, who asked Carolyn Chrisman to chair the Committee. The Committee represented the community well deserving recognition. A booklet commemorating the 150th anniversary is being developed. We will use some of the funds remaining from the City’s budget for this event to pay for one for each Committee member. A letter of appreciation will be prepared and each City Council member will be asked to sign it. We also received many compliments for the event. Melanie Smith and Brad Selby were members of the Committee and did outstanding work. Council Member Mills organized a team of individuals to play in the baseball game with the Vintage Baseball Game. Included with this Newsletter is a flyer from the Civil War display that is still at the Kirksville Arts Association until September 4, 2012. In addition, we are getting closer to receiving an agreement from the State on the placement of the Battle of Kirksville marker to be set at Veterans Plaza in Rotary Park. A copy of this marker is also included in the Newsletter.

SALES TAX HOLIDAY

Last weekend shoppers were able to take advantage of the Sales Tax Holiday for back to school supplies. The city opted to participate in this event, giving shoppers a savings on our local sales tax. Sales tax exemptions were on school supplies, computer software, personal computers and clothing. The City offers two such sales tax breaks throughout the year, this one in August and one in April on appliances.

FIRE DEPARTMENT

The Fire Department is in the process of recruiting for a new firefighter. They will hold their physical agility on August 24. The Fire Union is also planning to participate in the annual Muscular Dystrophy Association's boot drive to raise funds for MDA. They plan to conduct the boot drive later in August.

GENTS AND JOULES

For the past two years, the City Council has approved the sponsorship of for the annual Gents and Joules fund raising event for the NEMO Heart health Corporation. The funds from the event go toward the purchase of AED's to be placed throughout the community. The City's representatives on the NEMO Heart Health Corporation have been the ones who have attended the event on behalf of the Council.

MML ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Registration is now open for the Missouri Municipal League Annual Conference in Lake Ozark for September 16 thru 19. Councilmember Jerry Mills plans to attend. Rooms fill up fast, so please let Vickie know as early as possible if you would like to attend. The program is listed under www.mocities.com.

PERFORMANCE CONTRACTING

Staff will be meeting on Monday to review the proposed projects provided by Schneider Electric, and then Brad Selby and I will be meeting with Council Member Russell to review the Performance Contracting program and answer his questions.

BANK PROPOSAL

The City's banking agreement with the Bank of Kirksville was set to expire on August 31, 2012. The agreement allowed for a two-year term extension. The Bank of Kirksville offered a proposal to extend the agreement for two years with a decrease to the interest rate from 2.08% to 1.0%. The proposed rate decreased 52%, but is approximately 300% of the current market rate offered to the general public. The City accepted the offer to extend the agreement which will now expire on August 31, 2014.

USE OF SIDEWALKS

The owner of the Princess Mall, located across from City Hall, called to see if they could set items out on the sidewalks during the annual Red Barn Art Show, September 15, 2012. Since they are just one block south of where the Red Barn Arts Show is held, I wanted to check with the Kirksville Arts Association to gauge their thoughts on this. The Ordinance requires Council approval to place items on the sidewalk and gives the City Manager some latitude in those areas immediately around the square.

STUDENT WELCOME

On Saturday, August 18, the Chief of Police has been given an opportunity to participate in the President's Welcome for the new students attending Truman State University this fall. Chief Hughes will have ten minutes to talk to the students. We are pleased to be given this opportunity. One of the messages that he will be sharing with the students is that while they are here in Kirksville, we consider them to be residents and encourage them to explore the community and get involved.

KIRKSVILLE LEADERSHIP INSTITUTE PROJECT

Each Kirksville Leadership Institute class selects a community improvement project to complete. The 2012 class is working to install doggie stations. Funds from pay-back nights will be used by KLI towards their annual service project. This year's project is to install "doggie stations" around the walking path on the Kirksville RIII school campus. Once they are installed, it would be expected that the City would have some responsibility for maintaining them.

DISPOSAL OF BICYCLES

The City accumulates numerous bicycles of varying conditions throughout the year. We have disposed of these bicycles in a number of ways including silent bids and auctions. These events take a lot of time. We would like to see if a private nonprofit group exists locally that would be interested in taking the bikes off of our hands. This group would then check for new impounds on a somewhat regular basis selecting those bikes that are mechanically sound and have some value. The remaining bikes would be scrapped for salvage with Perfect Metals.

HARTZELL PURCHASES RELIANT

Included with this Newsletter is a press release that was issued by Hartzell Hardwoods out of Ohio. Hartzell did complete its purchase of Reliant Hardwoods. The following link takes you to the company's history which began in 1875 by its founder John T. Hartzell. <http://www.hartzellhardwoods.com/timeline.htm>. With their 135 year history Hartzell now exports lumber to 40 countries in Europe, Asia, and the Middle East. They are an environmentally conscience company, as well as an innovator in new technology. The revolving loan given to Reliant Hardwood through K-REDI was paid off today. We will be presenting the City's agreement with Hartzell, hopefully on August 20. The agreement with the City will provide Hartzell with lot 6 of the Industrial Park.

E911 STAFFING

It looks like we have been able to hire two individuals to fill the vacancies that we have had in our communications center. Tara Hamlin has been hired and a second individual has been offered the job expecting to begin on September 1. E911 staff will be attending training on the new law enforcement records management system. The City Council authorized the purchase of this new records management system back in May 2011. It replaced a DOS based system. Prior to our purchasing it, the system was being used by the Adair County Sheriff's Department, and Truman State DPS followed us by converting to this new system. We have had some issues with the integration of the system amongst all the users, law enforcement personnel have been trained and the E911 staff will be trained later this month.

INSURANCE SERVICE ORGANIZATION (ISO)

In early October, we will be meeting with the City Council to review the ISO rating received by the City this week. This organization conducts an evaluation of city services in 3 areas: water distribution; firefighting and communication. This evaluation resulted in an improved rating decreasing our number from a 4 to a 3. The insurance rating is used by many insurance companies to help determine insurance premiums for businesses. This is good news.

YMCA CAMPERS REWARD

Mayor Detweiler, School Resource Officer Rich Harden and Police Officer Matt Kellison were special guests at a reward luncheon sponsored by the YMCA to recognize 12 of their student campers who over the course of the 12 week summer program displayed strong citizenship values. The event took place on Thursday of this past week. The Summer Camp is a program offered by the YMCA.

SALES TAX REPORTS

The local one cent sales tax that supports general fund activities is up slightly for the same period last year (first 6 months). The economic development sales tax has been used to pay the local cost for the Highway 63 lane expansion project between Kirksville and Macon. It appears that sufficient revenues will be collected by September for the Corporation to make its final payment. The original expectation was that the tax would need to be collected either through September 30, 2012 or when the revenues are generated to paid the Highway 63 Transportation Corporation's payment, whichever was sooner. So it is very close. The revenues from the tax will then go towards the City's payment to MoDOT for the Alternate Route Project.

BULLDOG BBQ & BLUES

The City Council was asked to allow the use of Franklin Street for the inaugural Bulldog BBQ & Blues: The Smoke at Stokes set for September 8. The Committee will not need the road closure after all. The organizers will provide crossing guards at the site to help handle the traffic. This event is an officially-sanctioned barbeque competition and will include live blues music and a tailgate party before the home opener.

PUMPS AT HAZEL CREEK

While inspecting the Hazel Creek Lake raw water pumps under load, a pump failure was found. We are asking the pump manufacturer to evaluate the pump, and expect to at a minimum pull it and rebuild it. This crack is significant enough that it is a concern. Will let you know the status when we meet next. This is one of the original pumps dating back to 1982.

UTILITIES

Effective August 1, Atmos Energy was officially acquired by Liberty Utilities. Atmos made the first announcement back in May 2011, but the sale had to meet all state and federal requirements. Atmos sold its Illinois, Iowa and Missouri natural gas distribution business to Liberty Utilities. Also, you may have seen the letter from Ameren notifying us that they filed revised tariff sheets with the Missouri Public Service Commission. The increase is a 14% increase for residential customers.

THE BATTLE OF KIRKSVILLE

A STATE DIVIDED:
THE CIVIL WAR IN MISSOURI

On Aug. 6, 1862, Col. Joseph C. Porter and 2,500 confederate recruits occupied Kirksville, Mo., and prepared to fight a pursuing force of 1,000 Federal cavalry led by Col. John McNeil. For a month Porter had rampaged across northeast Missouri, enlisting men and disrupting Federal operations. Porter decided to occupy a strong position in a town, bloody his pursuers as they attacked and then slip away as the Federals were recovering. He had originally selected Memphis, Mo., but when he learned some of his men held Kirksville, he headed there instead.

Preparations for Battle

Porter arrived in Kirksville early on August 6th. Though his force outnumbered the Federal troops, most were inexperienced and less than half were armed. Porter left his horses and unarmed men in the woods west of town. He concealed an advanced line in buildings and cornfields along the north and east sides of town and placed his main body in ambush behind a rail fence, two blocks west of the courthouse.

A hero to the North, Col. McNeil was reviled by the South as "Butcher McNeil" for his brutal treatment of confederate guerrillas and sympathizers.

The Federal troops, under Col. McNeil, commander of the District of Northern Missouri, reached Kirksville from the Northeast around 10 A.M. McNeil's force was disciplined, well-armed and supported by five pieces of artillery. Many of his men had not eaten in two days and their horses were worn from the pursuit, but the men were eager to fight now that Porter was within grasp.

McNeil set up his headquarters at the Cumberland Academy where he ordered his men to set up the artillery, a 12-pounder mountain howitzer, a pair of 2-pounder steel rifles and two field guns of the 3rd Indiana Battery. Half of his troops were to attack on foot, while the rest served as a reserve and guarded the horses and wagons. Lt. Col. William Shaffer commanded a battalion of the 2nd Missouri Cavalry (Merrill's Horse) and detachments of the 2nd and 11th Missouri State Militia (MSM) which formed the right wing of the attack. East of town, Maj. Henry Caldwell led the left wing, consisting of detachments of the 3rd Iowa Cavalry and the 1st State Militia Cavalry.

The Fight for the Town

In order to locate the Southerners, Lt. John Cowdrey and a squad of about eight men galloped toward the square hoping to draw fire. "I regretted to see him called out to execute this perilous order," recalled Capt. George Rowell, a friend of Cowdrey. "Not a shot was fired until the little squad arrived at the second street, when from each side the fusillade [barrage] commenced and it is safe to say there were at least 100 shots fired at this little band." Five of the squad were wounded, two of them mortally.

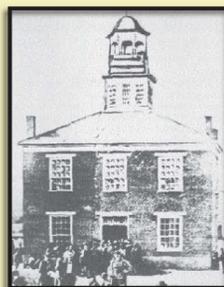

With Porter's men located, the Union artillery opened fire. The heavy barrage caused Porter's raw recruits to panic and many abandoned their positions. Union Maj. John F. Benjamin witnessed the effects, "Our fire, and the effective discharges of grape and shell from the Indiana battery, soon made the place too hot for the rebels, and they 'vamooseed the ranch' in the most approved style. . . . Many were brought down in their attempt to escape."

The Federals rushed the first line of buildings. On the right, troopers of the 11th MSM seized two houses and fired on confederates hiding in the cornfield. The surprised southerners threw down their weapons and ran. Others offered stiffer resistance. A detachment of Merrill's Horse assaulted a house where confederate R. K. Phillips was stationed, "Merrill's men formed in front and charged, but double-barreled shotguns are an ugly thing to charge on. They made three charges but were forced to fall back."

As the outer line of houses fell, the confederates retired into the town. The Union artillery advanced while McNeil's two wings converged and seized the courthouse. The Confederate main line opened fire from the rail fence to the west, but the Federal right wing drove it into the brush. Porter ordered a retreat, and his men rushed to their horses. Elements of the 11th MSM chased them through the brush, capturing prisoners, horses, guns and equipment. The southerners streamed west to the Chariton River. The retreat descended into chaos as the road narrowed at the bridge and the crowded men pushed in fear. A detachment of Merrill's Horse tried to follow, but their horses were too exhausted.

Aftermath

After three hours of fighting, dead and dying littered the streets of Kirksville. Approximately 100 Confederates were killed and 300 wounded, many of them having been hit as they retreated. Federal casualties numbered five dead and 32 wounded. One civilian, Elizabeth Couts, was killed when she was caught in a crossfire. Two Federal surgeons and a local doctor treated the wounded for 60 hours without stopping. "I visited two of the churches," recalled Assistant Surgeon John W. Trader, "and their wounded filled the body of the church, with all the pews taken out; they were lying on the floor on straw as thick as sardines in a box." Forty-seven unwounded Southerners were captured, but most were released on parole after swearing not to fight again on pain of death. Fifteen, who had been paroled before, were executed for violating their previous oaths. They and the other confederate dead were buried in mass graves in and around the town cemetery.

Porter's Campaign in Northeast Missouri

In April 1862, Confederate Maj. Gen. Thomas C. Hindman sent Col. Joseph C. Porter, a prominent farmer from Lewis County, Mo., to operate behind Federal lines in northeast Missouri. Porter was to raise recruits, harass the federals and return with his men to Arkansas. He organized a network of spies, couriers, and recruiters and by early July was ready to strike. He captured Memphis, Mo., on July 13, revealing his presence to the federals, who were soon scouring the countryside for him.

During the next two weeks Porter's band rode more than 500 miles — recruiting, fighting, and capturing arms and equipment. Soon his force had grown to nearly 300 men. Porter took his men into Callaway County to cross the Missouri River, but he was defeated at Moore's Mill on July 28 and was forced to turn back.

Porter headed north, closely pursued by Federal cavalry under Col. John McNeil. The Southerners captured Paris, Newark, and Canton, Mo., then halted in northwestern Lewis County around August 3. By then Porter's command numbered more than 2,000, thanks to his successes and to a recent Federal order drafting all men into the Union militia. Many who had thus far remained neutral joined Porter rather than fight for the North.

His success was tempered when the Confederate loss at Kirksville resulted in the disbandment of his army. Porter kept about 300-400 recruits and set up camp not far from his Lewis County home. In mid-September, Porter led his men to Palmyra, Mo., where they captured, and later killed, a pro-Union citizen. The next month, on Oct. 18, 1862, 10 Confederate prisoners were executed at Palmyra's fairgrounds in retaliation for the murder. The Palmyra Massacre was a grim ending to Porter's 1862 raid in northeast Missouri. Porter was mortally wounded on Jan. 11, 1863, at the Battle of Hartville, Mo., and died a month later.

Hartzell Acquires Reliant Hardwoods

PIQUA, Ohio, August 3, 2012 - Hartzell announced today that it has acquired the assets of Kirksville, MO-based Reliant Hardwoods, a division of Renneberg Hardwoods. The company's core business involves purchasing, processing, and selling hardwood lumber worldwide. Terms of the transaction were not disclosed.

"Reliant Hardwoods is an important strategic step to grow our hardwood lumber business", said John Owsiany, President Hartzell Hardwoods. "This acquisition provides the geographical diversification we need to better serve our customers. It adds capacity to our current manufacturing production and gets us closer to the mainstream walnut sources. We will be able to offer a wider range of species for our customers. Our strategic plan is to invest a significant amount of capital in our Kirksville facility to increase capacity. Over the next 12 months we will incrementally double the number of people we employ there." Hartzell Hardwoods is known throughout the world as a leading producer of fine walnut lumber as well as top quality thick stock red and white oak lumber. Hartzell Hardwood's philosophy continues to be characterized by innovation, quality, and integrity.

For more than 137 years, the family owned Hartzell companies have been synonymous with top of the line quality and industry altering innovations. The company displays its dedication and extensive knowledge within each of its divisions – Hartzell Air Movement, Hartzell Hardwoods, and Arkansas Face Veneer. Hartzell Air Movement currently encompasses both axial and centrifugal fans built for longevity within the rigorous requirements necessary for industrial environments. The third company, Arkansas Face Veneer utilizes the latest advances in splicing technology to produce high-quality veneer products from over 100 different species resulting in a product that provides customers with true value. Throughout history, all three Hartzell affiliated companies contain remarkable integrity, dedication, and innovation which will remain a staple in our corporate culture of quality, value, and commitment.

Hartzell manufacturing facilities are located in Ohio, Indiana, Arkansas, Missouri and Singapore. For more information on Hartzell, visit www.hartzell.com.
